Sneak-thieves have been at work again—this time at a house on Kukui street.

There is an epidemic tendency in Honolulu which is as dangerous as powder.

We are indebted to Mr. M. Thompson for files of interesting Eastern papers.

It is reported that Dr. Peterson of Kaneohe will shortly move to Honolulu to reside.

Messrs. E. P. Adams & Co. will sell the lease of the property at Niu at their salerooms at noon to-day.

General Secretary Fuller will lead the Young Peoples' prayer meeting at the Bethel Union Church to-night, for the Rev. E. C. Oggel.

Levey's regular cash sale of general merchandise will take place this morning. Mr. Levey will hold a sale by the order of the marshal at noon.

The people of Honolulu ought to take time by the forelock and empty two or three buckets of lime in every water closet and cesspool in the city.

The cash receipts at the Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening were over $60, besides the tickets sold which will swell the total to about $100.

Mr. Tong Wo's store near the first bridge on Nuuanu street was burglarized early last Sunday morning. Goods and a small amount of cash not exceeding $5 were carried off.

The secretary of the Y. M. C. A. announced last evening that Major Dane would speak at a "Children's Service," to be held at Fort Street Church at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

Major Dane will deliver a lecture at Fort Street Church next Monday evening for the benefit of the W. C. T. U. and G. W. De Long Post, G. A. R. on "Grant, the Soldier and the Man."

Mr. Joseph E. Wiseman bought the sloop Lark yesterday for $60. Mr. Wiseman will christen her the "P" and that's just what his friends are asking themselves, "What'll he do with her?"

The matutinal cucumber served at Nolte's is raised at his Casino ranch. It is warranted to kill a small boy at twenty yards and invariably causes a doctor to grin when one happens to sit down to Mr. Nolte's hospitable board.

A picture of Charlie Reed, the "plain comedian" as he used to call himself, can be seen at the cigar store of Charlie McCarthy on Hotel street. The picture was taken some ten years ago and represents the actor, who is well known to many of our citizens, as he appeared in his prime.

The Royal Hawaiian Band gave a concert at the hotel last evening in honor of the officers of the Italian man-of-war. The programme was mostly Italian music—at least the authors of it were mostly Italians. There was a fair attendance and the threatened showers of rain for once at least did not fall.

Yesterday about noon, when the street was full of school children, about 300 cattle were driven through School street by natives who were taking them to Ewa. The Press has spoken before about allowing wild cattle to be driven through the streets. When an accident happens censure should be cold-blooded and severe.

A pig wandered into the jewelry store of Mr. Lindsay on Nuuanu street the other day looking for pearls. Mr. Lindsay gave the porker one of his stern ancestral glances and his pigish immediately walked out—grunting as he went—and put his snout into the gutter. Moral: Whenever pigs go poking around looking for pearls, give them the G. B.

The oldest employee of the Honolulu Iron Works, Mr. Antone Neilson, a Norwegian by birth and about 50 years of age, died last Wednesday at his residence on Liliha street. Mr. Neilson was a blacksmith by trade and had risen to his present position in the foundry by hard work and close attention to his business. He was merely a helper at the forge when he commenced work here.

A young mechanic who rooms in Mr. Fowler's house nearly opposite the residence of Mr. Thomas R. Foster on Nuuanu street had a suit of clothes stolen from his room during last Wednesday night. The young man retired about ten o'clock and the clothes were hanging in the room at that time. When he got up the next morning the clothes were gone. There is no clue as yet to the thief.

Honolulu Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar, sent to Cincinnati a short time since for a lodge banner which they received by the last steamer. The banner is made of white silk and is fringed with gold. On one side, standing in the centre of a wreath of tropical flowers is a native woman holding a kahili; on the other side is a motto in gilt letters and a masonic emblem.

Yesterday afternoon Messrs. J. M. Oat, Jr. & Co., presented the Oceanic Base Ball Club, through its Captain Mr. W. A. Kinney, a fine champion bat made of seven of the different woods of the Islands. The bat is highly polished and the different woods are skillfully inlaid in parallel strips with intersecting rings of dark wood. The handle of the bat is mounted with an ivory knob beneath which is a silver band engraved as follows: Oceanic B. B. Club. Championship 1885. From J. M. Oat, Jr. & Co.

They say: that married men need watching; that the eclipse was first discovered the other night by a moonlight party, yum, yum; that the horsemen may expect fun at the next races; that the printing press assists a man to make a fool of himself; that poi is too cheap to have any tramps in this country; that Fort Street damsels always walk in the middle of the street, after ten o'clock; that somebody's coming down on the next boat from 'Frisco who'll make "Johnnie's" heart go pat-a-pat; that a young gentleman fell in the mud trying to get over a back fence the other night; and that the Premier intends to ask His Majesty's resignation.

Word has been brought to Honolulu of a murder at Hakalau, Hawaii. The murder was committed last Sunday. A native was killed by another native, his son-in-law, who struck his victim on the head with a piece of scantling until the brains oozed through the skull. The murderer was drunk when the deed was committed. The next morning he denied killing his father-in-law. After a preliminary trial the murderer was committed to the Hilo jail and will likely be brought to Honolulu by the Kinau next Sunday morning. The difficulty which caused the killing originated in the son-in-law beating his wife. The father of the woman interfered and was killed. All the parties are reported to have been drinking.

We learn that Mrs. Montague-Turner has been engaged as leading dramatic prima-donna, and Mr. Turner as first dramatic tenor, in "Theodore Thomas' Grand American Opera Company," for a tour of 60 weeks in the United States, to commence January 4, 1886. Mrs. Turner will appear as "Lenta" in the "Flying Dutchman," and as "Elsa" in "Lohengrin," two of the most difficult characters to sustain in these celebrated operas of Wagner's. Her first appearance will be in New York City, where the company will remain fifteen weeks, and probably will reach San Francisco in September, 1886. Mr. Turner, in the meantime, will make a concert tour in the United States to terminate the last of October.

Day before yesterday our unique comrade Mr. William Williams of the Honolulu Rifles, etc., held a "picnic" at his palatial residence in the middle of the bay. The occasion was the birthday of one of the "dozen," and "Bill," who is familiarly so called by the boys generally, collected his brood around a big tub-full of thick clam chowder. The "childers" ate the chowder all up and left Bill sitting with a big wooden spoon in his hand. About nine o'clock comrade Bill appeared at the "Camp Fire" of the Grand Army and immediately proceeded to "fill up" on army beans. Between fork fulls he occupied himself telling a Press reporter that he never read the Press because there "warn't never nothin' in it." Will somebody please inform Bill that he will find something interesting in it this morning?

During last Wednesday evening a robbery was committed at Lele, beyond the Chinese theatre, at Mr. Waller's residence in the rear of Rawling's soap works. It seems that Mrs. Waller was spending the evening with Mrs. Rawlings and it was during her absence that the theft was committed. The amount stolen was $400 in coin. The money was kept in a tin box in a store room. Mrs. Waller did not have occasion to enter the room after her return and the money was not missed until yesterday morning when she entered the store room and found that the keys to an iron box containing silver ware had been taken from the hook, the box had been opened and the silver ware pulled out upon the floor. The tin money-box had also been opened and the money taken. The jewelry and silver were found in the iron box were left on the floor. The police took two Chinamen in charge on suspicion yesterday morning and a thorough investigation of the matter will be made.

The Allie Rowe.

The following extract concerning the unfortunate Hawaiian brig Allie Rowe, is published from a letter dated Hongkong, August 8, 1885 and received by Mr. Robert Cathcart of this place by the last mail:

"In my letter by last mail I wrote you some particulars about Capt. Holland, thinking that this mail I would be able to inform you of better luck, but as it is almost seems that the Allie Rowe has very little luck for him.

He arrived here with his ship half full of water, but managed to get into dock and get repaired and to afterwards get a charter to Tientsin and back for $3,000. His dock expenses were about $1,000 and if luck had been with him he might have been back to Hongkong in 2 months with all expenses paid and $1,000 clear profit for his troubles, but poor devil, it was going to be otherwise. He loaded all right enough and left for Tientsin, via Chefoo on the 19th inst., on the 20th there was a typhoon blowing here enough to blow the hair off one's head and I was then constantly fearing for poor Capt. Holland. Both I and my wife were conversing on the probability of the brig pulling through it, but imagine my feelings this morning when I took up the paper and read that the Allie Rowe came back into port last night the crew just managing to keep her afloat by constant pumping.

Poor Capt. I have not seen him yet, but I dare say he will come up to my place this afternoon, this being Saturday. Just imagine what hard luck! Poor fellow, I wonder what he will say when I see him, I suppose he will be quite disheartened. I shall certainly try to cheer him up and tell him that it might have been worse; that he, ship, crew and all might have gone to the bottom of the sea, and so he might! Just think of it, a ship full of old iron, laden with her copper one foot under water and then springing a leak in a typhoon; why it makes one shudder to think of it. You have no idea what a typhoon is, I have gone through three of them since I came here and I tell you whenever one of them commences blowing I pity those who are afloat, and especially this last one, knowing Capt. Holland to be within 100 miles outside of port."

Constantinople, the Queen of the Levant.

The lecture last evening by Major Dane in the hall of the Y. M. C. A. building was listened to by a large audience, and was a most interesting and vivid description of the ancient city of Constantinople and its surroundings.

The lecturer prefaced his description by stating that a visit to the "Queen of the Levant" had been looked forward to by him with intense longing for years and that when he at last approached it from the sea and found it hid in a smooth dense fog he was inclined to do what all now do when they are not thinking; that is—grumble.

However, the fog melted away as the steamer neared the harbor, one minaret after another appearing above the vapor, and then the domes of the mosques, and finally the whole venerable and picturesque city lay before him, seated, like Rome upon seven hills.

There were the great palaces, the domed churches and other massive buildings, behind and about which dark cypresses stood in solemn groves. One felt that beneath those funeral trees dark deeds had been done. One recalled the assassinations upon assassinations which the history of the city was full of, until it seemed as though the view charmed one like a glittering serpent, repelling yet fascinating.

At the hour at which the steamer dropped her anchor, 6 A. M., there rang from many minarets throughout the city the call to prayer. "Allah! Allah!—God is great! Come to prayer—Prayer is better than food—God is good—Come to prayer." Five times each day this call is repeated, and each time all good Mussulmen kneel in prayer.

The speaker described how from the swarm of boats of every shape and size that surrounded the steamer one can select the one that bears the name of the hotel one is bound to, and how the traveller surrenders himself and his baggage to the care of the porter in the boat and is taken to the custom house and afterwards up steep, narrow streets, that make up in length what they look in width, until safely lodged in his hotel in that part of the city called Pera, where we foreigners live. Stamboul is the home of the Mussulmen, Greeks, Arabs, and "foreigners."

Many sketches were given of street vendors of all kinds, of goods and eatables, and the peculiarities of the dog of Constantinople were depicted in a vivid manner. To them, aided by the daily breeze from the Bosphorus and its flowing stream, Constantinople owes what it possesses of cleanliness and health.

After looking about him in the Hotel the lecturer took his audience into the streets where every variety of tongue is heard and costume seen. It is a peculiarity of the Eastern brain that it can acquire languages with ease and everybody speaks from five to fifteen.

From one of the two lofty fire towers the grandest view is obtained of the city, its environs, and the Bosphorus, fifteen miles long with seven promontories on one side and seven on the other, and on its bosom lay nineteen iron-clads, black powerful engines of war and destruction.

The lecturer had the honor of meeting Osman Pasha who, as Commander of the Turkish Army, made the tremendous defense at Plevna, and also Hobart Pasha, the chief naval officer of Turkey, with the first he attended a grand military review, and with the latter visited the iron-clad squadron in the harbor.

A glowing description was given of the contents of the great Treasury filled with gold and precious stones—of the magnificent palaces and superb mosques, the language used by the lecturer recalling the pages of the Arabian Nights.

The concluding remarks having reference to the present and future condition of the Mussulman Turk were full of interest, and we regret that our available space will not permit us to give more than this too brief synopsis of the lecture. It extended over an hour and a half and was full of interest throughout.
